Because Wallsburg was an early settling place for the pioneers of Wasatch County, they have many very old barns. This barn at 1937 South 1300 East in Wallsburg was built by Joseph Aaron Myler in the early 1900s. He and his wife Rebecca Young were married in 1888. They purchased the property from the Nuttles, and built the barn there. They are the great-grandparents of Rebecca and Dave Cordner, the next owners of the barn. David Cordner repaired the barn and put on a new roof in about 1960/1965. He was a perfectionist according to his daughter Rhea Carlson, and really put that barn into fine order.

The barn was built of pine to store hay, and it is still being used by Dale and Rhea Carlson to store hay for their animals: Cows, horses, and sheep. Information from Rhea Carlson.
